

Art Basel to turn Collins Park into public art exhibit

Opening night is December 3rd and there will be performance art

Author: Andrea Torres, Local10.com Reporter, atorres@local10.com

Published On: Nov 24 2014 06:18:14 PM EST Updated On: Nov 26 2014 05:22:57 PM EST

ART BASEL MIAMI BEACH, Fla. - A walk in the park takes a different turn during Art Basel week.

The fair brings a public exhibit that will display 26 pieces at Collins Park, 2100 Collins Ave., in Miami Beach. The Bass Museum of Art faces the park and will have an invitation only event that night.

For opening night at the park Dec. 3, Ryan Gander, Christian Falsnaes, Alix Pearlstein, Liz Glynn and Dawn Kasper will feature performance art.

Gander, 38, is an English artist who works with a team of technical specialists. Falsnaes, 34, was born in Denmark and works out of Berlin. He likes to use sound. Pearlstein, 52, of New York, creates videos that are often abstract dramas.

Glynn, 33, was born in Boston and works out of Los Angeles. She works on sculptural installations. Kasper, 37, is a performance artist from Los Angeles. Crime scene photography inspires her.

Glynn and Kasper will be presenting "cosmo[il]logical" in the middle of the park under a dome structure with light projections of outer space. The floor will have black chalkboard paint. The artists said science inspired their act.